nouncing the release of Ellen M. Stone-a name not so friendly shore or from other ships, soft-and the arrest of Rev. Tsilka, would jar anyone. If Rev. Tsilka is a co-conspirator in the ransom plot to capture Ellen M. Stone and his wife, why may not his recently of the largest safe deposit door and vestibule leader of the law and order element and wife have been privy to it? As Mme. Tslika was a in the world, telling also of the enormous size of the dercompanion and confidant of Miss Stone, in what light is Miss Stone left? If the Rev. Tslika loves his wife, and his wife loves Miss Stone, all being intimate friends, and should the suspicions of the Turkish authorities prove well founded, who is*capable of springing the net without catching the entire covey? Set a thief to catch a thief. The Turk is a treacherous sneak thief, born so and from heredity. If the Turk really suspects Tsilka, then the sympathetic people who put up the seventy-five thousand dollars ransom money will be entirely at sea, without compass and no land in sight, unless Miss Stone herself compass and no land in sight, unless Miss Stone herself comes to their rescue with the strongest evidence of her own and Mme. Tsilka's innocence. However, as is to be sincerely hoped, the Rev. Tsilka may be all right, and probably is, and the unspeakable Turk all wrong, as he usually is, and everything in the episode honest, save the blood-money which the Bulgarian bandits are supposed to have got away with.

THE WATER WAIL OF KANSAS CITY.

For a whisky town the Kansas City papers talk very much about water. In fact of iate editorially and reportation in the savings of the poor largely. Yet is offers absolutely no barrier against such scoundaries as substituted that the convention and the less prudesh wing of the party. This man by his own confession wrecked the bank because he had become involved in speculation. He did not need to get through a ponderous door weighing 42,000 in various kinds of speculation without giving any security. Now hundreds of poor working people go about distracted seeking the savings of a lifetime in vain.
